A new and standard to off a control of the control

BY CRANSTON & NORMAN,

127 TRAMES STREET.

FRIDAY MORN'G AUG. 1, 1851.

ILIMr. Russell's Fourth Reading took place at Bellevue Hall, Wednesday evening, to a large and intelligent audience. His last Reading takes place this evening, at the same place. The Programmo is very interesting and attractive, and we hope to see another full house, at this his closing Reading.

We have repeatedly called the at tention of our readers, among the citizens and visitors, to those intellectual entertainments; and we are glad to see, on each evening, that they have accepted of our advice, and attended at Bellevoe Hall. Mr. Russell parsed many years in close and severe study, in preparing himself as an instructor in Elo quition, and a public reader. The result of all his arduous labor is most gratify ing to his numerous friends, and must afford a pleasing reflection to himself .--At the close of his course here, Mr. Russell will visit the different water places in Yirginia, where he will give courses of Readings. It is his intention to pass the winter at the South, where we know that he will be very popular.

The Programme for this evening is of an exceedingly numerous character, and is well calculated to interest the audience. We have noticed a very general attendance of Clergymen, law yers and other professional gentlemen. at all the Readings of Mr. Russell which shows most conclusively that his talents are fully appreciated by those who rock for enjoyment above the mere frivolties of fashionable life.

MR. EDITOR :-

I did not witness the incident recorded in your paper of this morning by your correspondent "Phi Alpha," but the collision of which he gives a brief notice may have occurred as much probably from rapid, as from careless driving in which too many indulge, especially within the compact limits of the town. Where time and space are wanted for the pull-up, or, recovery, exill is of little use, and collisions! then most occur, often affecting person as well as property. For the benefit of those who thus disregard the obligations due to humanity, let Section Fire of the town ordinances be read.

Yours, PEDESTRIAN.

UPZophyr number 2, by the "Spy at the Ocean House," will appear tomorrow morning; the author informs us that it will be equally as pleasant and interesting as the first, and will create as great a sensation as that did.

(3) The Intelligencer says the Picsident, accompanied by Secretary Stuart will leave on Tuesday next to visit the valley of Y rginia. They will inspect the Government works at Harper's Perry, then proceed to Charleston, then in Shannondale Springs, where they will meet the citizens of Jefferson, Clark and London counties; and from thence will proceed to Winchester, Capon Springs and the White Sulpher Springs.

The Revenutre between Generals Quit, mon and Foote, at New Orleans, previously reported, arose from Foote giv. ing Quilman the lie, when several blowfollowed.

MOBE WISE THAN NICE .- On the last trip of the Admiral from St. John to this city, a nice young man, one who had never travelled much, went into the barber's room and got shaved .--This task done with, he went to the washeroom adjoining, washed his face and I shed about "the toilet table" for ____what? His questions will tell the whate story, and show how unsafe it is for a person who has been brought up in the wilderness to assume the character of a man of hishion and refinement. Be it understood that the young man in question was very green; porsessed of a peculiar style of pronunciation, differing very line from that of a live Yankee. However, as he was a man of conecoucher-in his own estimation-he though, he must be rather exquisite, and for this purpose he put on the tone of the Alem Joine."

As we were about to say, after wash ing he blustered about and asked the barber in a loud tone of voicehAw, barbaw, where is the tooth brwush?

"We have none," said the barber,

"What! no towth brwush! But where is the public towth browsh? that is what t mean-the brwitch generially used by passengers."

bWe have no brush with which you can wash your teeth, sir," politely respended the knight of the lather brush.

"No brwush!-no tewth brwush!boat Se this, and no tewth brough on board. Haven't I paid my fare? Can't The tweated like a gentleman? Is it possible that pawesengers are compelled to twavel from one countrwy to anothaw without the privilege of sceawing his teeth? Oh, monstrwous!"

At this moment the porter happened to pass the door of the bather's room, and "the shaver," who is sometimes up to fun in a low tone, ordered the said porter to go the stewart's room and get the brush used for polishing the silver ware. This procured, it was handed to the exquisite, who looked at the porter, then at the barber, and again at the brush, which was about an inch and three quarters wide, and at the same time he remarked:

"Aw, my dear fellow !-- that looks something like, neaw; but it is wrather lawge faw a dyclicate meanth like

"Yes; it is rather large-but they make the public tooth brushes larger now than they did in old times," responded the barber.

"Verwy likely," said the simpleton as he jammed the brush into his mouth taugnter trock the previously sment lookers on told him that he had better take some dark corner of the boat for the remainder of the voyage--which he wisely did .- Boston Bee.

A Love Scene .- "Fanny!" he said, in a tone of not to be mistaken tenderness. She turned quickly towardshim, and his voice had called the blood in glowing blushes to her checks.

"What! you here?" she exclaimed in a voice as clear and ringing as a silver bell; "I did not hear you come to the gate."

"I have been standing here some minutes," he said, as she stepped down upon the walk and moved slowly cowards

"Watching me -- re you?" said the laught gally. "Do you mak me mundsome? Come, now tell me the truth "

"Handsome is not the word," said he, with a look which attested his sinceri-

"What is the word, then? Come confess, I'll have no secrets kept from me p she raised her finger with a gesture of playful imperiousness, but before he could answer, she changed her tone and resumed; "come in-I ought to have said an anonce "

"No, he replied; "I came to ask you whether you would not walk with me this beautiful afternoon; so, go in and get a sun bonnet, and let us walk over to the trysting tree."

"It is very improper," she answered, for a young lady to go a Maying with a young gentleman on a Sunday, all alone." Yel, as she spoke ! her clear, glad laugh rang merrily among the trees, and echoed beyond the road.

"But," she resumed with mock solemnity, "I will go with you this time, if you will never ask me to do so again. "Agreed," said he, "and I will make the same pledge every Sunday till-"Till when I's she demanded with a lock which could only be denominated quizzical.

"Till the time," he answered, "when there will no longer be any impropriety in our being alone in any place at any time.31

"And, pray, when will that be?" she asked, with a flash in her soft, brown eye, which manifested that her question was superfluous.

"When we are married," said he. "Oh!" she exclaimed with a well acted start, as if suddenly frightened. She laughed as pleasantly as if that time had come already; and tripped cliner fully away to get her bennet.

127 THAMES STREET. FRIDAY MORN'G AUG. 1, 1951.

113 Mr. Russell's Fourth Reading took place at Bellevue Hall, Wednesday evening, to a large and intelligent audience His last Reading takes place this evening, at the same place. The Programme is very interesting and attractive, and we hope to see another full house, at this his closing Reading.

We have repeatedly called the attention of our readers, among the citizens and visitors, to these intellectual entertainments; and we are glad to see, on each evening, that they have accepted of our advice, and attended at Bellevue Hall. Mr. Russell parsed many years in close and severe coudy, in preparing himself as an lastructor in Eloquiion, and a public reader. The result of all his arduous labor is most gratify ing to his numerous friends, and must afford a pleasing reflection to himself .-At the close of his course here, Mr. Russell will visit the different water places in Virginia, where he will give courses of Readings. It is his intention to pass the winter at the South, where we know that he will be very popular.

The Programme for this evening is of an exceedingly numerous character, and is well calculated to interest the audience. We have noticed a very general attendance of Clergymen, lawyers and other professional gentlemen, at all the Readings of Mr. Russell. which shows most conclusively that his talents are fully appreciated by those who seek for anjoyment above the mere frivolties of fashionable life.

MR. EDITOR:-

I did not witness the incident recorded in your paper of this morning by your correspondent "Phi Alpha," but the collision of which he gives a brief notice may have occurred as much probably from rapid, as from careless driving in which too many indulge, especially within the compact. limits of the town. Where time and space are wanted for the pull-up, or recovery, skill is of little use, and collisions then most occur, often affecting person! as well as property. For the benefit of those who thus disregard the obligations due to humanity, let Section First of the town ordinances be read.

More Wish THAN NICE .-- On the last trip of the Admiral from St. John to this city, a nice young man, one who had never travelled much, went into the barber's room and got shaved .---The task done with, he went to the wash-room adjoining, washed his face and leoked about "the toilet table" for what I His questions will tell the whole story, and show how unsafe it is for a person who has been brought up in the wilderness to ussume the character of a man of histion and refinement. Be it understood that the young man in question was very green; possessed of a peculiar rivle of pronunciation, differing very little from that of a live Yankee. However, as he was a man of consequence-in his own estimation-he thought he must be rather exquisite, and for this purpose he put on the tone of the "dem toine."

As we were about to say, after wash ing he blustered about and asked the barber in a land tone of voice-used by passengers." "We have no brush with which you can wash your teeth, sir," politely responced the knight of the lather brush.

"No brauch !- no towth brauch !- a bont like this, and no tewth brivish on board. Haven't I paid my fure? Can't The tweated like a gentleman? Is it possible that pawseengers are compelled to twavel from one countries to anothaw without the privilege of sceawing his teeth? Oh, moustewous !"

At this moment the porter happened to pass the door of the barber's room, and "the shaver," who is sometimes up to fun, in a low tone, ordered the said porter to go the stewart's room and get the brush used for polishing the silver ware. This procured, it was handed to the exquisite, who looked at the porter, then at the barber, and again at the brush, which was about an inch and three-quarters wide, and at the same time he remarked:

"Aw, my dear fellow!-that looks something like, neaw; but it is wrather lawge faw a dyelicate meawth like

"Yes; it is rather large--but they make the public tooth brushes larger now than they did in old times," res ponded the barber.

"Verwy likely," said the simpleton as he jammed the brush into his mouth taugnter 'tront 'the 'previousty entent lookers on told him that he had better take some dark corner of the boat for the remainder of the voyage--which he wisely did, - Boston Bee.

A Love Scene,-"Fanny !" he said, in a tone of not to be mistaken tenderness. She turned quickly towards him, and his voice had called the blood in glowing blushes to her checks.

"What! you here?" she exclaimed in a voice as clear and ringing as a silver bell; "I did not hear you come to the gate.15

"I have been standing here some minutes," he said, as she stopped down upon the walk and moved slowly sowards

"Handsome is not the word," said be, with a look which attested his sinceri-

"What is the word, then? Come. confess, I'll have no secrets kept from me!" she raised her finger with a geeture of playful imperiousness, but before he could answer, she changed her tone and resumed; "come in-I ought to have said so sooner ? you whether you would not walk with me this beautiful afternoon; so, go in and get a sun bonnet, and let us walk

over to the trysting tree."
"It is very improper," she answered, "for a young lady to go a Maying with a young genileman on a Sunday, all alone." Yet, as she spoke! her clear, glad laugh rang incirily among the trees, and cohoed beyond the road. "But," she resumed with mock solemnity, "I will go with you this time, ii you will never ask me to do so again. "Agreed," said he, "and I will make the same pledge every Sunday till-"Till when?" she demanded with a look which could only be denominated quizzical.

"Till the time," he answered, "when there will no longer be any impropriery in our being alone in any place at any time."

"And, pray, when will that be?" sho asked, with a flash in her solt, brown eye, which manifested that her question was superfluors.

"When we are married," said he "Oh!" she exclaimed with a well act ed start, as if suddenly frightened. She laughed as pleasantly as if that time had come already; and tripped theer fully away to get her bonnet.

We believe Dr. C. M. Jackson's 'Houfland's German Bitters,' to be a most excellent medicine, and one than should be highly popular in these days of Temperance—for they are allogether Vegetable in their composition, without one drap of Alcohaits Spirits in them. This medicine is insocret, but strengthening in its effects, and richly deterving of an unbounded populative, which, when it becomes known, it will, no doubt, fully enjoy."

Judge M. M. Rosh said, in his "Weekly Merrogor," January 6, 1250,

"Dr. Hoghard's Gussan Bittor.—Here is a preparation which the leading preserves in the Union appear to be combined in recommending, and the reason is chrimes. It is made after a prescription familished by one of the most endewated physicians of modern times—the law Dr. Christopher Willelm Houldand, professor to the University of Lenguia the physician to the king of Pruesia, and one of the greatest medical writers Germany has ever pendiced. He was emphatically the enemy of humbar, and therefore a medicine of which he was the inventor and enderse may be confidently relied on. He specially recommended it in Liver Compitant, Days epria, Debility, Vertigo, Acidity of the Steerneth, Constipation, and all complaints arising from a disordered condition of the steemar their way in our of the retentions. Nice Philadelphia appear express their conviction of its excellance, and severally the article to all addition."
